This is it guys. We are finally going to do it. We are going to form a game design playtest group. I'll set up a Google doc and start a discussion about what kind of games to playtest. We can try out a lot of different game types, there's just so many to choose from! And best of all, the group is completely transparent. The only thing we need to figure out is what our plans are going to be. Do we just decide to playtest things? Or do we need to have some kind of formal agenda? That's going to be a big factor, so keep that in mind as we start planning. I want to make sure we're having fun and learning. Our games need to be inspiring, for us and for the community we're working to grow. If you want to join, let me know. You can submit your own lists of games or ask what everyone else has played that they're interested in playing. This is a good way to get your game idea in the running. Happy Holidays! And if you don't have a game you want to work on yet, don't worry, there's plenty of time! We're going to keep everyone around through the end of December, so keep that in mind! We're not done yet. So the new year has begun and I can't wait to see what it will bring! It's been a wild year so far, with me being kicked out of my job and starting on a new adventure. On the one hand, I'm back in my favorite place ever, the playing world of tabletop games. On the other, I have to face the cold reality of being a working stiff. Despite that, I'm looking forward to making progress in my career and working to improve my life and the quality of things in it. I'm also working on a number of game projects, some of which I hope to get started on in earnest. For instance, we've been testing out a few combat rules in HOJD, and I'm thinking about a variety of game systems to use. I'd like to get the rest of the Modiphius crew on board as well, and the whole crew is getting more and more games we can play and add to the Game Boy list.
