Start a Reply Cancel.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing device, an image processing method, and a storage medium. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, a market for a digital camera has become much larger, and a digital camera has been used for various purposes. The digital camera has a function of recording image information taken by a digital imaging apparatus as a still image in an internal memory or as a moving image in a recording medium such as an IC card. Images taken by the digital camera can be displayed on a display in a state of a high resolution and a high quality as when the user is viewing the images through a monitor. However, image information taken by the digital camera has not been converted to a recording standard and quality. Therefore, when the image information is reproduced on a recording medium such as an IC card by a reproduction unit, the image is reproduced in an unsatisfactory format for the quality. However, in the case where image information taken by the digital camera is reproduced in a high quality and a high resolution by the reproduction unit such as an IC card, the most of the image data taken by the digital camera is used for the recording onto the recording medium. Therefore, there is no way of reading the image data to a large capacity such as an IC card.Q: How to create a benchmark comparing something more meaningful than just GC time? I'm trying to create a benchmark that measures the time it takes for something. I want to time it across multiple iterations of the same test so I can compare the time the same test takes. Currently I'm
